EDWARDIAN

Edwardian
1960

Preface

The color of our book is red, and this color symbolizes many things. Things warm and alive, like our school. Things as joyful but as dogged, as happy but as determined and all-spending as the lives of the men who teach us. It also symbolizes the ever-growing revolution in the world, a revolution which can not but affect our lives. It stands for the glow of the embers of past fires which have made possible the continuing fire of our day. It stands for the flame of new ideas, new thoughts, new ways of looking at the past, the present, and the future. It stands for the fire which will devastate fear, ignorance, and hatred. It stands for the flame of the Spirit which will enkindle hope, knowledge, and love. It symbolizes the challenge flung furiously to us, the youth, and the violence with which we must grasp it, cherish it, keep it aglow, and then pass it on to others. The color of our book is red.

The art work in our book means that there are at least two sides to every story, the one which is obvious and can be seen through immediately, the other which is more hidden, more mysterious, but just as real. It means to say that we should learn to look beneath the surface to richer and more potent truths than meet the eye. The sketches of the saints, patrons of various activities, indicate the ever-lasting truth that every endeavor of man has found a saint to extol and exemplify it, and that we, too, can use all things to aid us in our sanctification.

May the red fire of courage and love give us strength to stand up against the surface meaning of life, to see, without bias, the many sides of truth and the stamina to follow in the footsteps of the saints.

Dedication

Our dedication of the 1960 EDWARDIAN is to those young Brothers, Scholastics of the Congregation of Holy Cross, whose appearance is a daily affair on our campus. This is our salute of respect to the more than one hundred young Brothers who have the courage to fling back into the hands of Christ their worldly possessions, their hopes, their futures -- their lives.

Such dedication on their part proclaims louder than words the audacious, daring, generosity which prevails among Catholic youth. It proclaims, too, the clear-sighted, deadly seriousness with which they view the teachings of Christianity and the reality of the ever re-echoing invitation of Christ, "Come, follow Me!"

Their comings and goings to and from university classes remind us of the fact that preparations are being made for the education of Catholic youth of the future. That their preparation includes knowledge of the things of this world, only in order that an opening might be made in which to present the more important truths concerning the world to come.

On campus, and in the Congregation of Holy Cross, their numbers reach into the hundreds. In other Orders and throughout the world their numbers reach into the thousands. But the number is never completed, and the voice of Christ still echos, "Come, follow Me!"

To Make A Brother
It Takes ...

prayer, for without Christ
we can do nothing ...

the discipline of study essential to acquiring knowledge ...

the common sense to know when
and how to relax ...

a variety of healthy interests, which often includes lifting one's voice in song ...

and the willingness to take on any task which may be assigned, everyone of which becomes a part of the total dedication.

Faculty

Behind the facade of administrative paper work, records to be made out, grades to be recorded, tests to be filed, and all such stuff to be done, are the human being to whom these passing tasks have been assigned. Behind the voice of the teacher who delivers his daily lecture, collects his daily assignments, administers his more or less frequent tests, upbraids the phlegmatic student, urges on the more energetic student, and wears the lifeless habit of black, are the human beings to whom you, the students, have been entrusted. Though sometimes indiscernable, the minds and hearts of these administrators and teachers are alive with concern over you as individuals. But mostly, under the guise of their faults and failings, and non-descript appearances, is the truth that they are Christ-bearers, instruments through which now and again the light shines through.

FATHER JAMES J. O'BRIEN, C.S.C.

IN MEMORIAM

The face of the priest is gone; the voice of the Father is silent; he no longer makes his rounds of the chapel, the corridors, the bookstore, the cafeteria, the campus. He is no longer with us and we miss him, and so we border his picture in black.

But who is to evaluate the life which he has left behind? How many times in the course of his thirty years here at Saint Edward's has God used him as an instrument of grace? A single sentence in a Sunday sermon has struck home and a single sin has been avoided; a brief talk before the boys left for a holiday and the altar rail was crowded for the reception of Christ in the Eucharist; morning, noon, and night, the tap on his door, and a penitent was made sure of the love and the friendship of Christ.

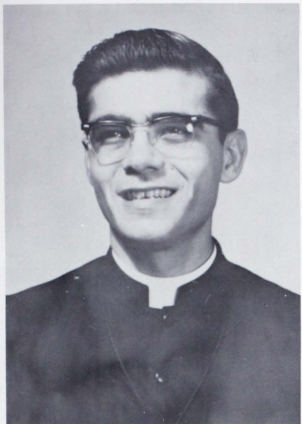

How many times in thirty years had he responded to the request, "Father, give me your blessing"? We wonder and stand in awe at the seventy times seven he has spoken in the name of Christ and said, "I absolve thee...Go in peace." And what infinite glory to the Father has been given in the daily sacrifice of the Mass for forty-six years! "I will go up unto the altar of God, to God who gives joy to my youth..." At those moments of sacrifice what current of the ever-lasting life of God rolled in a mighty wave from the altar to those beyond it!

The graces, and the influence of those graces, which Father O'Brien brought down on those who came into contact with him will go on from generation unto generation. His was the Spirit of the Father and the Son; he has given that Spirit to us and it will not die.

May the angels lead thee into paradise; may the martyrs receive thee at thy coming and lead thee into the holy city of Jerusalem. May the choir of angels receive thee and mayst thou have eternal rest.

We mean our tribute to be a thing of hope, of life, and of love, and so we border it in red.

Seniors

Four years, and in those years what changes could be written about if each senior were to take pen in hand. Boys, to all appearances, have been changed to men. One holds a job and draws a salary almost equal to his father's; another is ready to join some branch of the country's armed forces; still another contemplates an early marriage; and for another there is the quiet consideration of giving back his life in the service of God. But these actions and decisions have not been spur-of-the-moment things. Rather, they have emanated from the well-spring of that complex inner-self which is the true you. If a senior would know how well he has been educated, let him ask himself how well he knows his hidden self, how much he has discovered about his undiscovered self. There are two sides to this coin of the inner-self; both sides must be studied with care in order that those things which belong to this life might be rendered to this life, and those things which belong to the life of the spirit might be rendered to the God of that spirit. Know yourself, for this is, indeed, the beginning of wisdom and knowledge.

Juniors

There is an adage as old as the world, and it is this: "What you are to be, you are now becoming." Behind the car you drive, the clothes you wear, the face which you present, there lies in waiting a character to be developed into you. Like all things living, that character has at its roots a two-fold aspect: one negative, the other positive. The choice as to which one you will develop is up to you. The manner in which you think will determine the manner in which you will act, and the manner in which you act will determine what you are. And what you are, not what you pretend to be, makes up your character. Hawthorne told the story of Feathertop, the fable of a stick-and-straw conglomeration which passed itself off as a man, but when the "thing" finally saw itself for what it was, it wept. There is a difference between Feathertop and you: Feathertop could make no choices, could make no changes; you can. Discover, then, those strong points which make up the true you. Think in terms of bringing them to full bloom. Face boldly those things about yourself which are negative, then weed them out, plow them under, and turn their wasted energy to that which is constructive. How long ago and who said: "You've got to accentuate the positive, eliminate the negative!"?

Sophomores

It is true only in a sense that "no man is an island", for every person has his own sense of being one and alone, even though he is ever conscious of the vast ocean of people who surround him. A sophomore is just beginning to realize this. He senses, too, that the rise and fall of the tide of this ocean bears its effect upon him. The breaking of that ocean on his shore as a person leaves its impress upon him. The gentleness or harshness with which it washes over the rock of his character has much to do with what he will be later, when others come upon that island to make the discovery of what he is. He must discover, then, the well-spring of strength which is within him. Recognize that with the grace of God "he is the master of his fate, he is the captain of his soul". Let the waters of friends, society, and circumstances buffet or bathe him, he must, at any cost, keep the innermost body of that island in tact. Let the world make its dashing appeals to the outside, but let the inside be adamant when it comes to right and wrong. If he does this, the individual waves of that ocean will respect him, and he will not become washed over and forgotten, lost in the sea. He will, instead, become an individual to be reckoned with, a permanent and lasting Island whom the ocean knows, admires, and respects.

Freshmen

Even a Freshman can see through that which is fake and phoney! Injustice puts fire in his eyes, venom in his tongue, and strength in his arms and fists. Deceitfulness can easily shock him. Pride, when it lords itself over him, makes him rebellious. Unkindness and a lack of understanding, when he bumps into it, can make him bitter and secretive. What a freshman sometimes does not understand is that "he who takes up the sword, shall perish by the sword"; that for deceitfulness there is an explanation founded on understanding; that rebellion is a form of pride which does not vanquish pride; that bitterness is a lack of sweetness and love. The earlier one starts to master the techniques of war, the better the warrior he will make. No better time than when he is a freshman to learn that he has within him two sets of weapons: the one as wrong as the evil he would oppose; the other stronger and more positive than any force which will ever be against him. Strangely enough, the negative weapons make the greatest show, look the most positive, and sound the noisiest; the positive weapons, hidden deep within him, make no show, and yet have all the force and power which we know to be that of the Quiet Man.

Cubs

Cubs do not particularly like philosophizing. They like stories, and so ... Once upon a time three blind men were brought before a mighty elephant. Each man was told to go to the elephant, touch it, and then return and tell what an elephant was like. The first blind man approached the great beast, stretched out his hand and, in his groping, grasped the elephant's tail, whereupon he shouted for all to hear, "I know what an elephant is like! It is like a snake — long, thin, and twisted." The second blind man approached the elephant and extending his hands plowed full into the elephant's side. He pushed high and low, this way and that, and then, with absolute confidence declared, "Why, an elephant is nothing like a snake. An elephant is like a wall — high, broad, and immovable." Then the third blind man felt his way toward the elephant, and, just as he came close, he stumbled and fell. He reached out his arms and found himself surrounding a single, heavy leg which made him draw this conclusion, "An elephant is nothing like a snake; an elephant is nothing like a wall; but an elephant is ever so much like a stout tree trunk! And that's a certainty!" Obviously, each blind man was wrong. Not one of them could see the whole elephant, and so not one of them could see the whole truth.

Truth has many sides; we must not be afraid to look at all of them.

Activities

Six-thirty A.M. is hardly an early enough time for rising; ten P.M. is too early a time for retiring, and this because there are so many things to be done in a Saint Edward's day. The round of classes is taken for granted; one has to do those things. But life really begins at three in the afternoon. Then begin those activities too numerous to mention. But these activities fit into our theme of "two sides to every story". Sometimes the two sides of even the surface of these activities are missed. Behind each activity lay hours of faculty planning and organization; equipment does not "appear", it must be purchased; teams do not "show up", arrangements must be made before hand; a play or a band concert is not "put on", it is rehearsed for weeks before; a Science Exhibit isn't "had", it is the result of weeks of calculated preparation. But over and above these considerations are the underlying purpose of the activity: to give the student an outlet for positive, constructive energies. An activity provides him with a real-life opportunity to display his hidden talents, his inward set of values, his undiscovered potential for self-control and self-discipline — all of those things which life in the every-day-world will sooner or later call forth. It is in the realm of activities that the undiscovered self most frequently and honestly reveals itself.

Scholastic Achievement

Saint Thomas Aquinas - saint, philosopher, theologian, and doctor of the Church is the patron of Catholic schools and scholars. His enthusiasm for learning made him see all things in God, and God in all things, and this double vision made him see through the things of this life into those of the next.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Pictured on this page are those Edsmen who have the distinguished and unique privilege of being awarded the highest scholastic recognition which the school can give -- that of being enrolled in the National Honor Society.

The object of the Saint Edward's Chapter of this nationally recognized honor society is to create enthusiasm for scholarship and to stimulate the desire in students to render service. Admittance to the Society is not easily come by.

It is rewarded for four things: Scholarship, which demands at least an eighty-five percent cumulative average, evidence of service to others, some indication of worthwhile leadership in and around school, and evidence that the student has backbone and character.

The true Edsmen is a boy dedicated to high and holy ideals.

He does more: he not only consents to be led by worthy guides, he accepts the obligation of leading others. With his teachers and classmates he is henceforth committed to the task of teaching others by his life to serve God in truth, in holiness, and in purity.

JUNIOR NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

For many boys the realization of the importance of study and good study habits dawns in the sophomore year. Most Cubs and Freshmen are willing to take their chances on finding out just how much has to be done to "get by". The middle road is always the easier road, the high road makes many demands.

Young Edsmen who have consistently made honors at the time of report cards know the value of good grades, for they have learned this value in terms of extra hours of study, steady performance when it comes to handing in homework, close attention in class, and conduct in keeping with scholarship.

At Saint Ed's it is not enough to spend time with books. The boy aspiring to the Junior National Honor Society must also find time to contribute something to the spirit of the school by a willingness to give his classmates a hand with their studies, by showing leadership and willingness to work on school dances, a show, a team, or some other worthwhile activity.

Sincerity of scholarship and leadership is proven when the junior member of the society retains his standing and becomes a member of the National Honor Society for upper classmen.

JAMES BERGEN

VALEDICTORIAN

James Bergen, four year Edsman, has well merited the honor of Valedictorian. Throughout his four years at St. Edwards, scholarship has been his forte. James entered St. Ed's on a scholarship from Saint Austin's Grammar School, since then his name has appeared on High Honors each six weeks grading period. In his freshman year he made the Junior Honor Society; he is presently a member of the National Honor Society. Besides fulfilling his obligations as a student, he has also found time to participate in three major sports, as well as to take part in such things as the Science Exhibit, the Scouting program, and school publications. Persistent good work always brings with it a reward. Congratulations!

Religion

Saint Peter, like Moses, is represented as striking the Rock of Truth which is the Church. From this rock flows the living waters of grace which bring man back to God, and bringing man to God is the purpose of religion.

High school Edsmen head for college chapel for a session of the two day retreat.

Father Donald Draine, c.s.c.
Retreat Master

For two beautiful October days, Father Donald Draine spoke to high school Edsmen about eternal truths, pointing out God's love and His plan for the happiness of those who will direct their lives toward Him. It was a positive approach which stressed the basic goodness of teen-agers, while at the same time it was a warning against those forces constantly opposed to the individual's salvation.

First Friday Adoration -- students before the Blessed Sacrament are brought quietly face to face with Christ, themselves, their own personal problems, and those problems greater in scope, but touching upon their lives.

MISSION CLUB

The Mission Club is one of the most important organizations in school. It is important because of the good that it does for others -- Holy Cross Missionaries and the vast number of souls for whom they labor. But the Mission Club is equally important because of the good that it does for the school and the individual students. It gives the opportunity for a generous giving of one's time, one's talents, one's financial help, and, most important of all, the giving of one's prayers for the cause of Christ.

Pictured above are a group of Edsmen who consider it the greatest of privileges to serve Mass. In the true Catholic tradition they consider themselves highly honored to attend a priest in offering the Holy Sacrifice. The server who attends to his duties with conscious care and awareness of what the Mass means finds that he is better able to fulfill his duties in paying the debts he owes to God: to praise and adore His infinite Majesty, to atone for sins, to return thanks for benefits received, and to implore the Author and Source of all goodness and grace for help that is needed.

Music

Saint Cecilia, virgin and martyr, is the patroness of music. Her's was a Christian life gloriously sung for Christ. Such "music" even now-a-days has the effect of raising the mind and heart to God, and, in so doing, bring joy to ourselves and others.

Brother Edwin directs St. Mary's Academy Choir at Christmas Program.

Dramatics

Saint Genesius, patron of actors, was himself a playwright and actor during the reign of Diocletian, in the third century. When he embraced Christianity in defiance of the Emperor, he was ordered to martyrdom, a fate he accepted happily rather than deny Christ or the principles of his new found faith.

In November, the cast of GIANNI SCHICCHI gave three presentations of the comedy. The final performance was given in San Antonio at the National Catholic Theatre Festival for the San Antonio area. The over-all production received a Superior rating; actors Hiran Marin, Jorge Isaac, and Juan Lehmann each received a Superior rating for his performance; actors Milton Hernandez, Raul Villagomez, Paul Barrios, and Rodolfo Lehmann each received a rating of Excellent for his performance.

Rinuccio Isaac has an anxious, greedy pack on his neck as he reads of Buosso's will.

No stage crew: no performance! George Martin, Mike Hammond, and Ralph Sharman put things aright for the acting cast.

Gianni Marin makes it quite clear that the family has been left NOTHING, and that it will take some doing to turn that nothing into something!

Doctor Madero arrives in time to give a speech, but too late to help a dead man!

Although he is about as dead as he can be, Uncle Buosso manages to keep the play very much alive, even from his questionable tomb under the bed!

Notary and Witness Lehmann only add more confusion to the situation by rejoicing over the wit and thoughtfulness of Uncle Buosso, who isn't Uncle Buosso at all, but Gianni Schicchi. Confusing? So was the play!

Saint Francis de Sales was Bishop of Geneva when Europe was overrun with heretics. His extraordinary gentleness and humility of spirit affected the return of thousands to the faith. His persuasive writings won souls for God, and, for himself, the patronage of journalists.

Saint Sebastian, patron of athletes, was a Captain of the Guard and a Christian. Because he would not deny his faith, he was delivered to the archers to meet his death. His courage, his stamina, and his determination to accept martyrdom rather than deny Christ make him a worthy patron for athletes of Christ.

SCIENCE EXHIBIT

The 1960 Science Exhibit was the result of the cooperation of five Catholic schools in the city of Austin. Students from St. Mary's Academy, St. Mary's Cathedral, St. Ignatius, St. Louis, and St. Edward's under the direction of science teachers prepared exhibits and demonstrations which made for an interesting, instructive, and entertaining evening for those who attended the exhibition.

The exhibit was sponsored by the members of Phi Beta Chi, the Science Club, at Saint Edward's. It was comprised of some one hundred and fifty projects and involved the active cooperation of more than half the student body.

At St. Edward's Brother Stanley Repucci acted as Exhibit Chairman, Brother Edwin Reggio was his assistant; Science Department members Mr. Lary Callan, Brother John Houlihan, Brother Rene Lenhard, and Brother Cyriac Haden were advisors to the many students participating.

Other Things

The activities which remain are entrusted to Saint Martha to whom Our Lord said; "Martha, Martha, thou art busy about many things..." Perhaps He questioned the intention rather than the doing. Life is made up of "doing", but, always, behind the action should be the intention of God's greater honor and glory.

The Editor, the Associate Editors, and those students who in one way or another helped to make the 1960 Edwardian possible are deeply grateful to the Patrons who, by their financial support made our publication successful.

If the students and the friends of Saint Edward's have found our theme, our thoughts, the pictures and comments throughout the book, interesting and provocative of happy memories and ideals, then our efforts have served a good purpose.

Sincerely,

Jon Hilsabeck, Editor
